

Guide to Initial Assessment for Accredited Courses

(courses that lead to a qualification)

Before you start your course

What would you like to study?

Contact your local Adult Learning centre for information, advice and guidance.

Accredited courses are offered at different levels of difficulty.

Too difficult

Too easy

Once you have decided on the right subject to study, we need to help you find your starting point. This is so we can match you to the right level of course and make sure you're on the right track.

1. Initial Assessment

An initial assessment is the first part of finding your starting point. This will help guide you to the right level.

We will support you to take an initial assessment online or a paper version. We will chat to you about your previous experience. For GCSE, we will also discuss with you the demands of the course to help arrive at the best decision.

2. Diagnostic Assessment

For English, maths and digital courses, the online diagnostic assessment will give you access to a fantastic range of on-line home-learning resources to match your own needs and help you make even better progress.

A diagnostic is the second part of the assessment and gives more information on finding the right level. It also helps show what you already know about the content of your course and where you can improve. You can use this information to set targets to help you make good progress in your learning.
