The Commons Act 2006

The Commons Act 2006 supersedes the Commons Registration Act 1965 and seeks to achieve wider benefits from improved management of common land around sustainable farming, public access and biodiversity.

Part 1 of the act requires commons registration authorities to bring their registers up-to-date by recording past changes affecting the registers (subject to a fairness test), and to keep the registers up-to-date by recording new changes affecting the registers - commons registration authorities will have new powers to correct many of the mistakes in the registers

Applications must be made on the relevant form available from: www.gov.uk/government/collections/commons-registration-application-forms

The Commons Registration Service cannot assist in completion of the forms we would advise you seek your own independent professional advice.

Do you want your name added to our email list to be notified of all applications we receive? Please send your details to: commons.registration@cumbria.gov.uk
